Propagandists fail Media's attack on the Tea Party is simply a wild fabrication

It has been widely reported by the mainstream media that Republican-Tea-Party-Right-Wing-Extremists are the cause of the government shutdown. To evaluate these claims, the Town Criers, a committee of the Saint Augustine Tea Party, took to the streets of historic St. Augustine, Florida to see if the American people were buying the media's claim. [See "A look at Town Crier's history" in this publication August 24, 2013 Ed]

Photos by TCC Staff

The Town Criers made their first stop, today, at the Castillo de San Marcos. This facility, administered by the National Park Service, was shut down. There were some people standing around the outside of the Castillo. The very disappointed public, upon seeing the Tea Party arrival, quickly and enthusiastically showed their pleasure towards the Town Criers. They eagerly took the Crier's signs to demonstrate their solidarity with the Tea Party movement. It is ironic, that just three months ago, the Town Criers would not have been able to demonstrate at the Castillo de San Marco because of the National Park Service's alleged 'First Amendment Area' zones. [See "Today, American Patriots had their First Amendment Rights assaulted, yet, again by the Feds on a public street" June 29, 2013 and "Federal agents violate Saint Augustine Tea Party's civil rights" July 4, 2013 in this publication ED]

The Tea Party patriots, refusing to surrender their first amendment rights, 'backed down' the National Park Service in St. Augustine. "We were delighted to see the World War II veterans, do as we did, challenge and 'resist' the Department of Interior's, National Park Service's edict to suppress Free Speech & Assembly. We Americans are honored by the bravery of these veterans. In their advanced years, they are still fighting for liberty within the shadow of the White House. It is time to stand up and defy the criminals in the 'People's House' and the people who support them in the various federal departments," a Town Crier spokesman said.

I WILL NOT COMPROMISE,
I WILL NOT COMPLY,
I WILL NOT SUBMIT,
I WILL NOT BOW,
I WILL NOT BREAK,
I WILL NOT ROLL OVER,
I WILL NOT SIT DOWN,
I WILL NOT SHUT UP,
I WILL NOT GO QUIETLY,
I WILL NOT GIVE UP,
I WILL NOT SURRENDER!

The Town Criers then proceeded to St. Augustine's historic St. George Street where they had an opportunity to engage people from all over the country. It appears that the people simply are not buying Obama's claim that Republican Tea Party extremists are the cause of the shutdown.

Obama's propagandists, though they beat the drum continually, are not winning the American people. The public was delighted to find the Tea Party on the streets with their signs. This reporter observed a trolley train passing by with the vast majority of the passengers applauding and cheering loud, "Go, Tea Party!"

Obama's attempt to create pain for Americans during the shutdown, then blaming the Republicans and the Tea Party is not going to work. From observations today, the public blames both parties for the shutdown. The Tea Party is the champion of the people in this contest. Today, David Stockman reported on Fox News that the shutdown in the upcoming debt ceiling issue is not directly linked with a failure of America to honor its debt obligations, including interest. He went on to say, parenthetically, that the only person who can create the situation in which the US would default on its debt is the President of the United States. Failure to raise the debt ceiling would only force Obama to set priorities. Daily, there are vast streams of tax revenues to keep America from defaulting. The media's hype only creates unnecessary fear and distorts the real situation.

Of Men, mice, and the Monster-in-Chief

by John Knapp

My father died in the hospital on Christmas night of 2006. He'd gone in for chemotherapy for stomach cancer, but he never got out. He went steadily downhill from the very beginning, and he died a miserable death, one you wouldn't wish on any human being. He was an M.D. in life, a general practitioner who was generally loved by his patients. He made house calls on sick patients, and often accepted a bushel of vegetables as payment for a bill. Once he even traded for a horse to clear up a patient's bill.

My father had his personal faults, but he was a good man, a good doctor, a hard worker, a good example, a MAN completely responsible for himself and his family. In his lifetime I'm sure he paid hundreds of thousands of dollars in taxes. He was once audited by the IRS over barely a hundred dollar mistake. Several years later he was audited again, over nothing, but this time the IRS backed off when they found out he had cancer. My father hated the idea of government-run healthcare, and not just because he was in medicine. He hated obnoxious government long before it became so much clearer to millions how obnoxious, arrogant, and self-serving government has fully become.

My father lied about his age in order to enlist in the Navy when he was still 17. It was spring of 1945, and World War II was still raging. He was sent to baker's school in the Great Lakes Region, to learn how to bake bread on board a ship. He wound up in the South China Sea on a wooden-hulled mine sweeper...an 18-year old kid baking bread by day and, by night, standing watch on deck for Japanese warships. The war ended fairly soon after he went to sea, but there were still mines, bobbing on the currents, to be found and destroyed.

My father was a 17 year-old MAN in 1945, a member of the greatest generation. He brought home a Japanese infantryman's rifle, complete with fixed bayonet, but never told how he came to have it. It hung on the wall over his desk in the family room for years and years. My father never lived to go to the World War II Veterans Memorial in Washington. But, by the man I knew him to be, he would have gone there this past week and shoved aside the Barricades and the National Park Service's hastily-erected fencing, growling "Who the hell do those people they think they are?"

The evening after my father died, the family all met at the local Applebees for the evening meal. There was a long line to get in, and we had to wait out front for maybe half an hour. I struck up a conversation with my new brother-in-law, who was a very well-paid DEA/FBI agent in South Florida. He told me that earlier in his work-life, he'd been in the Secret Service as one of President Clinton's bodyguards and limo drivers. I was duly impressed with his credentials.

Eventually the conversation got around to politics, and I told him the way government was trending, that one day soon he would have to choose between honor and something else, in order to know what kind of man he really was, and in order to decide what kind of a country he really wanted to live in. I could see in his eyes he was completely clueless as to what I was talking about. I tried to explain it to him further, but it was pointless. Several years ago, my sister divorced him for repeated infidelities. While that particular behavior was not political, it was telling of his character. I wonder if he yet knows what kind of man he is.

And so we've come to the mother of all government shutdowns. 83 % of all federal workers, the essential ones, are still on the job, but all National Parks are closed. Private parks adjoining public streets are Barricaded from the public. The State of Arizona cannot be allowed to operate the Grand Canyon, even with Arizona taxpayer money. Fishing holes off the Florida and Louisiana coasts are Barricaded. Border guards along the Rio Grande have been told to stand aside. The Vietnam War Memorial is blocked off. From sea to shining sea, government 'agents' have been instructed to 'inflict as much pain as possible on the citizenry', in order to make them amenable to Obama's and government's tyranny. And the mice complied!

And the World War II Memorial has been shuttered, with armed guards standing at the ready, should any more honorable, aged, infirm, dying old men in wheelchairs want to come to make a little peace with the horrible things they had to do in their youth, for the sake of American freedom, to bring a respite of peace to an otherwise insane world. Those armed guards in D.C. (and elsewhere), those mice, went out to the World War II Memorial to arrest ninety year-old honorable MEN, to disabuse them of any notion of trying to find some solace in a long-overdue goodbye to a chapter of their lives that has haunted the recesses of their old minds for over sixty years.

So, the question must be asked. What kind of an American President, what kind of a completely lousy human being, would stoop to such despicable behavior against his own country and countrymen? What kind of people work for this government that they would actually go out to enforce a despicable edict like this? Has the entirety of American government gone quite mad on behalf of a madman?

Forget Obamacare, budget battles, and everything else. It is time adults came to grips with our torment, this Monster-in-Chief. It is time for those extremely well-paid mice that work in American government to remember whose side they are on, or else go flip french fries at McDonald's, where the worst damage they can do is burn the french fries or occasionally set a kitchen on fire.

And, most importantly, it's time the American people decide what kind of MEN they are, or intend to become, and what kind of a country they intend to live in.

October 8th, our special guest was Janet Smith, a well known re-enactor and historian. The topic of discussion was "The Florida Second Amendment Preservation Act". A draft of a proposed Bill was presented to the Tea Party audience. The object is to get it on the docket for a vote in the next Florida legislative session, which begins in mid-March, 2014. This Bill will tighten restrictions on Federal incursions, from Obama-land, designed to counter our Right to Bear Arms.

Joining Janet was her husband, Bruce Smith, who gave a detailed historical sketch of the institution of the term, "the Right to Bear Arms". In the year 690 AD in Britain, a law was passed that said, "All fathers must get a long bow and teach their children to shoot". The object, of course, was self protection. From whom? Bandits, thieves, but more specifically...standing armies.

The 'standing army' was a subject abhorrent to our Founding Fathers. It was a standing army that encroached on the Colonists, which 'quartered' themselves, by force, in the homes of the Colonists. Thus, we have the 3rd Amendment of the Constitution protecting home owners from forced 'quartering' of soldiers.

Nor, is 'Disarmament' something new. All tyrants try to disarm the people.

In 1649, King Charles the 1st was executed for attempting to disarm the people. But time and again, each power hungry King or Potentate, tries 'disarmament' so that they will have absolute control over the people. Just 10 years later, after Charles the 1st lost his head, Cromwell, decided that the Catholics needed to be disarmed. Also, 'registration of fire arms' is nothing new. In the Seventeenth Century, Charles the 2nd demanded a weekly tally of the guns made in England.

The correct understanding of the Militia, according to Bruce Smith, is this:

The Militia is composed of the "whole of the People"; that is, all of the adult citizens. They must be adequately armed to throw off any tyrannical dictator.

The fear now, in the United States, is that there a 'de facto' standing army, where even small towns and villages have swat teams and armored vehicles.

Worse, they are wired into Federal Homeland Security. Thus, when the King in Washington, D.C. declares martial law, his edit is instantly directed to every little town and city in the Country.

Thus, We The People have a duty to arm ourselves, know our Rights, and strengthen our local State laws that nail down our Right to Bear Arms.

Janet Smith laid out the plan for Florida's "2nd Amendment Preservation Act" to the Saint Augustine Tea Party. Her presentation was well received. Twenty four patriots signed up for more information. Several will make up a core group for St. Johns County.

"It is always an enlightening experience when the Smiths visit the SATP. They both are so well informed. We always learn a lot from Bruce and Janet. More importantly, how to apply what we have learned to the situation at hand. Lock and load," said Chairman Lance Thate.

SATP at World Golf overpass

Tea Party supports the trucker's "Ride for the Constitution"

Photos by TCC staff

Today, the St. Augustine Tea Party engaged the motoring public on Interstate 95. The Tea Party members took a position on the overpass at the World Golf Village, which is located in the northern part of St. Johns County, Florida. From the moment the first Gadsden flag unfurled the horn-honking began. The Tea Party was out to support the trucker's "Ride for the Constitution" program. The interstate has three lanes north and three lanes south. The overpass also has three lanes in each direction, east and west. According to the tea party members, approximately 20,000 vehicles passed by during the 2 ½ hour outing. This estimate was based on sample counts during the course of their activities. They report that the local traffic on the overpass and interstate traffic were equally supportive. It appeared to this reporter that about two thirds of the passing traffic responded with arms waving, thumbs up, flashing lights, and of course, almost continuous honking of horns. "We did have some opposition if you consider the two thumbs down and three middle finger gestures. Comparing the positive responses to the negative, the score appears to be 13,200 to 5. "Makes you wonder about national polls," a tea party member said. "It seemed that the great majority of school buses passing also showed their approval by blowing their horns. It makes one wonder, if the bus drivers get it, it seems odd that those in the classrooms don't," another Tea Party member questioned.

The Gadsden flag was the attention getter

Signage that was used for the demonstration was borrowed from the Town Criers, a committee of the St. Augustine Tea Party. [See "A look at Town Crier's history" in this publication August 24, 2013 Ed] The lettering on the signs are usually used with the public being at a much closer distance, so it is unlikely that the passing traffic could easily read the signs. Their response was, almost exclusively, to the yellow flag associated with the Tea Party. In jest, a Tea Party spokesman said, "I wonder what kind of response you would have gotten if a donkey or an elephant was used?"

To 'Serve and Protect'

A remarkable addition to this story was observed. Early in the demonstration, a St. Johns County Sheriff's patrol car went by. The Tea Party personnel were concerned as there had been reports of difficulties with law enforcement on the overpasses, in other States. In August, two participants in overpass demonstrations were actually arrested in Missouri. When the first patrol car didn't stop, the demonstrators felt that their activities were on safe ground. When another patrol car appeared, a couple hours later, the group expected trouble. What transpired was just the opposite. The Deputy Sheriff had stopped to provide them with drinking water and to thank them for what they were doing for the country! Imagine that! Despite all the propoganda and beating up on the Tea Party in the mass media, there have been no arrests and no violence at all by Tea Party patriots in St. Augustine, or St. Johns County, and for that matter, in the entire Country.

The Tea Party members commented concerning the Deputy Sheriff pictured above, "This goes back to the 'good old days' when law enforcement was about serving and protecting. The St. Johns County Sheriff's Department, so far, has treated the Tea Party with respect. We will be in good hands if the system breaks down. Today, many other law enforcement authorities, particularly the Feds, are vested with the idea of 'enforcement and control' verses 'serve and protect'. The County Sheriff is the highest Constitutional Officer in his locality. It will be the Sheriff who will either protect you from federal abuses or not. That is why we all have to make sure the local Sheriff is elected, not appointed, and does not take grants from Washington, D.C."

The Saint Augustine Tea Party has had no adverse problems with either the Sheriff's Department or the City of St. Augustine Police

The Saint Augustine Tea Party (SATP) has had no adverse problems with local law enforcement. There seems to be mutual respect. This is not so, however, with the National Park Service (NPS) which maintains the Castillo de San Marco. [See "Today, American Patriots had their First Amendment Rights assaulted, yet, again by the Feds on a public street" June 29, 2013 and "Federal agents violate Saint Augustine Tea Party's civil rights" July 4, 2013 in this publication ED]. The Tea Party has had First Amendment issues with the NPS. Now it is reported that the NPS has abused elderly tourists in Yellowstone Park and has disrespected World War II Veterans in Washington. The SATP reports that the NPS Rangers have violated their civil rights, repeatedly, over a two year period at the Castillo de San Marcos. The SATP has asked Congressman Ron DeSantis to look into these constitutional violations by the NPS, which is Part of the Department of the Interior, controlled and directed by the Obama Administration. Profiling and harassment of the Tea Party and the Veterans, by the Federal Government in D.C., is truly an 'Obamanation'.

"God bless you and thank you for the cold water, Deputy," the SATP members said.

Are the bullies in the White House making wussies out of Americans?

Photos by TCC Staff

The Town Criers marked their 95th engagement with the public on the streets of historic St. Augustine, Florida, today. The Town Criers are a committee of the Saint Augustine Tea Party (SATP). [See “A look at Town Crier’s history” in this publication August 24, 2013 Ed] The committee has evolved into an informal sampling of the public’s opinion. The Town Criers do this by presenting politically incorrect signs to the public. The public’s reaction to the signs has repeatedly shown that the mainstream media has no interest in accepting public opinion. They believe their function is to mold the public’s view.

The “Big Red Sign” states that Obama Is a Communist

On May 26, 2012, the Town Criers introduced what they called the Big Red Sign. The sign was carried through the streets of Saint Augustine every week through the election in November, 2012. The public’s reaction was overwhelming support and they eagerly grabbed the sign to show their contempt and their understanding of who Obama really is. This is a subject that no one in the media was prepared to address. The pictures below are a sampling from October 6th and 13th, 2012.

October 13, 2012

“Big Red Sign” is re- introduced

After nearly a year’s absence, the “Big Red Sign” was reintroduced, today, on historic St. George Street and at the Castillo de San Marcos. Support for the Tea Party and the “Big Red Sign” was, at times, overwhelming. This reporter observed that when the Town Criers proceeded along Tolomato Lane between St. George Street and Spanish Street, the public presence broke out in applause along the entire route. Veterans of all ages saluted, the public stopped to shake hands, give high fives and in numerous other ways showed their support and their approval of the signage and the presence of the Tea Party. The Criers report that the photographic activity remains as intense as it has ever been. During the entire three-hour outing, there was a continual process of photographing of the Criers by the public. There were many assurances of social networking. It is conceivable that a couple of thousand pictures were taken. Clearly it is the Gadsden flags and the Tea Party signs that are the focus of their attention. The costumes and personalities have little to do with the public’s reaction. It has been reported that Sarah Palin believes a new third-party has already formed in the people. The Town Crier’s experience over the past several years confirms that opinion. The conversation will not be about Democrats and Republicans. They are despised. But in order for this new third-party to surface, the public will need to stand up. Today, with the exposure of the truth expressed in the politically incorrect signs, there was great acceptance. However comparing the reaction of the public from a year ago, there is one major difference.

Is Obama’s tyranny prevailing?

“A year ago the “Big Red Sign” was eagerly displayed by individual members of the public. On October 12, 2013, one short year later the public, while being willing and eager to be photographed with the sign were now less willing to hold the sign. Is it the beginning of a period of withdrawal, when in fact, it is time to be defiant. It is time to stand up and resist. If America chooses to become wussies, she’ll not deserve liberty. Come join the fight. Take a stand,” the Town Criers said.

Washington joins forces and attacks the Tea Party

Washington insiders and their media outlets blame the Tea Party for a foolhardy plan

The GOP breaks with its base and joins with the Democrats and Obama by ending the shutdown and extending the debt ceiling. With the media comparing the most recent shutdown to the shutdown in 1995, the Republicans showed that they have the no backbone, no principles and that they lack the skills for the street fighting tactics of the community organizer in the White House. "The GOP is so fearful of the media that they bring shame upon themselves by their continual inability to stand for constitutional governance. They simply rolled over to Obama's demands," a group of Town Criers remarked. The Town Criers are a committee of the Saint Augustine Tea Party (SATP). [See "A look at Town Crier's history" in this publication August 24, 2013 Ed] The committee appears weekly on the streets of the historic district of St. Augustine, Florida. They engage a national audience there. The Tea Party movement is vested in the people whose acceptance of the Tea Party presence can be seen in the photograph above.

The view from the street

While Washington insiders and the GOP leadership turn their back on the Tea Party, the American people are joining forces with the Tea Party movement. Sen. Ted Cruz, of Texas, has been championing the people's cause in Washington. "The Senator claims that he speaks for the people. From our experience, he truly does. Republicans like Sen. McCain and Karl Rove speak for progressives and elitists in Washington. The public, in their anger, are going to reject the GOP.” The public views Obamacare as a joke and those who refuse to use their power to fight Obamacare will be rejected,” the Town Criers report. This reporter witnessed Criers challenging the public by asking them, “Has anyone signed up for Obama care?” During the course of the afternoon, the public engaged in a humorous interaction. Only one person claimed that she signed up. After some conversation, however, it was clear that this person was a liberal and was clearly doing what Marxists do; that is to lie. The message from the street is, Obamacare is a joke and the ‘damaged brand’ of the GOP is not because of Tea Party positions. The damage has been self-inflicted on the GOP by denying its base.

Bikers love the Town Criers

The 21st annual Biketoberfest is being held in Daytona Beach this weekend. Many of the bikers found their way to St. Augustine. As you can see in the photograph on the right, Tea Party strength runs deep among the bikers.

Tim Constantine Returns to SATP

The SATP was honored to have Radio Talk Show Host, Tim Constantine as our guest speaker at the Tea Party Open Meeting on October 22, 2013. Tim was accompanied by his son, Michael, who took the group picture above. This was an encore engagement for Tim and those in attendance were very impressed with Mr. Constantine's presentation.

Photos by TCC Staff

Tim Constantine had a local radio show on WFOY for several years and is well known to Conservatives in St. Augustine, Florida. Today Mr. Constantine is host of TPNN Radio's "The Capitol Hill Show". The show can be heard weekdays from 3 to 6PM right over the Internet on www.TPNN.com/radio/. The station WTNT can be heard all over Washington, D.C.

Some recent interviews include Senators Ted Cruz, Rand Paul and Mike Lee, Congressman Steve Stockman and Ambassador John Bolton. Mr. Constantine's new position provides an opportunity for him to engage in exclusive interviews with major Washington, DC players. The SATP announced that it would be interested in providing a link to TPNN on its Web Site. Mr. Constantine welcomed the suggestion.

During a question and answer session, a question about the media failure in Washington, DC was tendered. Constantine expressed the fact that if a reporter asks tough questions, that reporter is simply dropped from future sessions. Therefore, they just don't ask the questions that the people want answers to. The Tea Party members saw this as a First Amendment challenge.

Town Criers center of attention on St. George Street

The Town Criers, once again, appeared in St. Augustine Florida as they do each Saturday to an awesome reception by the visitors to the historic district. The Town Criers are a committee of the Saint Augustine Tea Party (SATP). [See "A look at Town Crier's history" in this publication August 24, 2013 Ed]

The public's expanding rejection of Obamacare made the signs that the Town Criers were carrying even more popular. As the Town Criers approached, the people would say, "There's the Tea Party", or, "Look it's the Tea Party". It was expressed by the public up and down St. George Street last Saturday.

One family, however, was not too accepting of the Tea Party signage. The woman pictured below, in red with the straw hat, declared that the Town Criers activities were "hateful" and racist. She asserted that we had no right to judge Obama. It was clear that she did not like the Criers exposing the White House as communists.

Tea Party set up?

Photos by TCC Staff

It appeared, to this reporter, that the incident could well have been a setup. The woman making the hateful and racist remarks was immediately defended by her husband. His statement, "Don't you abuse my wife". In unison, the woman in black was shouting, "Don't you abuse my mama". The only abusive language observed, came from those two women. The Town Criers simply wanted to get past them and move on. At which point, the man wearing the veteran's cap, cut off a Town Crier member by turning in front of him with his power scooter. It is not certain as to whether the incident was photographed other than what you see here. This reporter was busy taking these photographs. The incident was short in duration as the Town Criers refused to engage. At no time were any Criers in close proximity to the woman who started the altercation. After the incident, the Criers proceeded to a position in front of the Columbia Restaurant. A short time later, the same group pictured above passed by without incident. Whatever motivated their aggressive behavior earlier apparently no longer interested them.

Silent majority no longer silent

The “Silent Majority” died off twenty years ago. The majority of Americans are still hard working, moral citizens who are aghast at the insane behavior of Obama and his Marxist co-conspirators. For sure, the public has been slow in getting involved in the nasty here-and-now as is reported in the ‘new media’. They had trusted the traditional political ‘system’ of checks and balances between the three branches of government. They voted every two years and went home to their private lives. Now, they are seeing that this detached approach is not working. The people are getting louder and more vocal. They see the Tea Party Movement as the revival they have been hoping and praying for. “Many trusted the Republican Party to be their savior. But, they have been betrayed by the likes of Senators John McCain, Lindsey Graham and the Republican leadership who support a progressive agenda,” a Town Crier stated.

“Now it is clear for all to see that Barack Hussein Obama is purposely destroying the world’s greatest health care system with his Communist pipe dreams. Communism has never worked, ever,” she continued.

Cloward-Piven

*a political strategy to overload the American public welfare system to the point it creates a crisis and bankrupts the nation, leaving the country no choice but to adopt a socialist/communist agenda

The Propaganda Press exposed

According to SATP Media Chairman, Dave Heimbold, “Politically Correct speech, or PC, is not Free Speech. It is groupie talk. It is tribal bantering. It is a collective language spoken by Marxists. It is the expression of the collective-unconscious. It is the language of the Community Organizer himself. It is the untruth. This untruth is wired electronically to every newspaper in the USA which subscribes to the AP (Associated Press). The AP also has its own grammatical rules. For instance, the Democratic Party may be capitalized in print but the Tea Party is not. The AP, once respected around the world, is now pure propaganda, half-truths, run by progressives.”

Truth is on the march

“The progressive movement, while still in power, is failing on all fronts. The ‘new vocal majority’ is determined to destroy that movement permanently. We are not prepared to surrender this Country. Silence is not golden. Political correctness is not acceptable. The racist onslaught, that we experienced today, has no merit. You want to call us racists, go ahead. It is meaningless to us. Truth is what counts. If you think it’s hateful for us to hate Communism, you’d better learn to live with it because we are not going away. “We the People” will not let you hide any longer. Let the word go out to all progressives that we are going to de-throne you. It does not matter whether you’re Republicans or Democrats, white or black. Your movement is based on lies. Truth will prevail,” a spirited Town Crier concluded today.
