The People will Trump the Party

Ronald Reagan's vision of America was a brief moment in the life of the Republican Party. With the election of George Walker Bush in 1988 the control of the party transferred to the Bush family. Their legacy has been a tragedy for the Country and for the "Grand Old Party". So accustomed to the control of the party, the Republican establishment attempted to impose yet another Bush. When they realized that they could not prevail, a series of controllable candidates were proposed. The trail of broken promises by the Republican Leadership has set up the determination of the people of the United States to secure a candidate and president who was not a member of the ruling elite.

Where is the Tea Party movement?

In 2008 a known Communist was elected President of the United States. The reaction was a populist movement that exploded on the scene. The spark that set it off was a TV rant by Rick Santelli on CNBC in early 2009. The Republicans saw an opportunity to control this spontaneous movement. They thought they could mold it to suit their own purpose. When they found they could not control the movement, they began to follow a systematic blueprint to destroy the Tea Party. A movement is a difficult thing to destroy as it resides in the people. The people that made up the original Tea Party were ordinary middle-class folks who wanted a better life for themselves and their posterity. They were not constitutional scholars and when they went to Washington, they didn't chant smaller constitutional government, they chanted, USA, USA. They wanted a government that represented them, and not the special interest groups. The Tea Party movement started as a populist nationalist movement. The word nationalist is the operative word. The internationalists of both parties saw the Tea Party as problematic. The hate from the Democratic Party, the contempt of the Republican Party tried to minimize the movement. The control or destroy policy of the GOP was effective. Tea Parties that were Republican controlled were soon infected with the corruption so prevalent within the party itself. Those Tea Parties that remained grassroots and independent tended to move towards a constitutional frame of mind and retained a fiscal conservatism/libertarian reference. Nothing that Republican leadership could support.

Along Comes Trump

For some time now Trump has described the attraction to him as a movement. One can wonder if he realizes that it's the same movement that started in 2009. The train is rolling in to the terminal at the end of the line. The momentum of the train has little to do with Donald Trump. He just got on board along the way. All kinds of people with vested interests are opposing Donald Trump's nomination. They step in front of the train at their own peril. Whether Trump will save the American dream remains to be seen. One thing is for sure, Americans will not surrender their liberty to the tyranny of the progressive movement. The Bush legacy is being rejected. The people are playing their final Trump card.

Guest Editorial by Jeff Doner

A Primary Revelation

This year's presidential primary season has brought many, many things into clearer view, a few of which some of us had surmised and some of which we had no prior clue about. One of the things this primary season has brought home to me in crystal clear terms is that Rush Limbaugh is a staunch establishment ally.

All during the GOP primary, Rush was playing back all the really negative stuff about Trump, no matter how absurd the claims and the charges. Of course, he claimed throughout that he wasn't going to take sides, but yet he aired all the nonsense put out by the anti-Trump mainstream media and anti-Trump pundits, in effect becoming yet another broadcast outlet for them. He was doing the work of the anti-Trump forces bringing their message to his millions of listeners. Of course, chief among the anti-Trump forces are the GOP Establishment, their press and pundits. It also seemed to me that for the most part, he defended Ted Cruz.

Today, he again gave the impression of being an Establishment man. As we all know by now, unless taken internal to a campaign in order to measure campaign progress, polls are paid for by people and organizations for a specific purpose. That begs the question, "why?" When the elections are held, we'll all know who won and by what margin so what difference does it make to know anything about it now? Why would anyone pay to have a company do a poll prior to an election? Because it appears that, they want to try to affect the outcome of the election. Knowing that many people only want to be on the side that wins, they commission a poll designed to generate a Rush Limbaugh specific headline. After the poll is taken and the desired result obtained, it is then reported as "news".

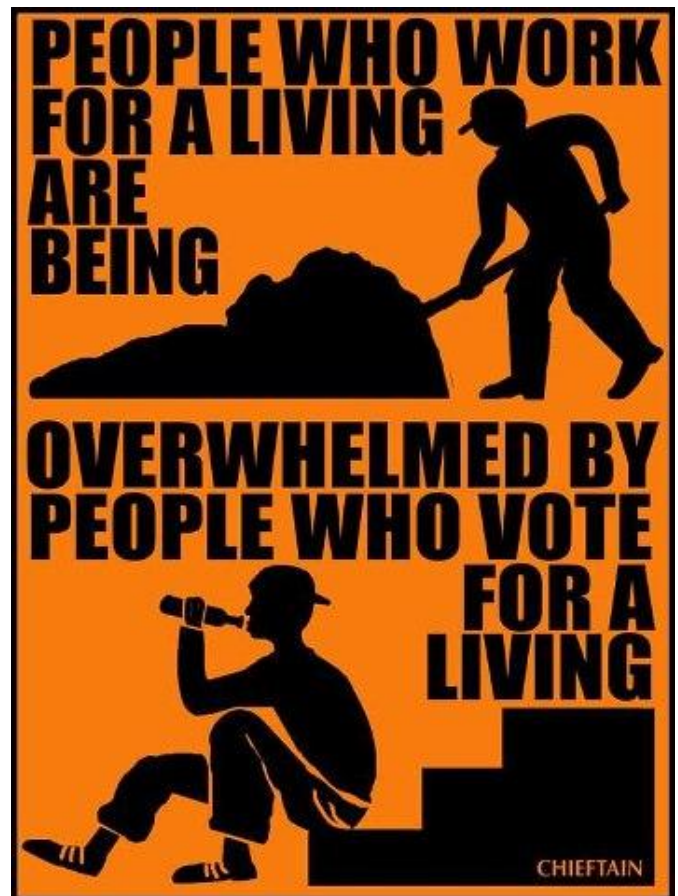

Back to Rush Limbaugh, today he opened his show talking about a man named Nate Silver. He described Silver as the man all the Democrats go to for polling and poll analysis. Then Limbaugh reported that Nate Silver had come out and – get this – admitted that his polls of Donald Trump were wrong! Well, no kidding? I have no idea of whose poll it was, but shortly prior to the Indiana election one of them had Cruz with over 50% of the vote! But the point is, here's a guy whose main customer is a leftist political organization of one sort or another and we're supposed to take at face value the idea that Trump, apart from all other people, was just too difficult to accurately poll?

When was the last time that the Democrats cared about the truth? Chances are, those polls showed exactly what the people paying for the polls wanted them to show – that Trump was lagging or that it was really close -- but now that it's over, Silver has to come out and tries to save some integrity for his business! Limbaugh doesn't know or suspect this? He used to be fond of telling his audience (TMI) that he knows the Left as well as he knows every inch of his glorious body! He went on to congratulate Silver for coming out and admitting his "errors".

So reader, what do you think we have to look forward to in political news between now and next November? It would be Polls. I won't venture to guess at a number but I believe that we will be inundated with polls the entire time and that the main thrust of those polls will be about how many Republicans are going to refuse to vote for Trump. As far as I'm concerned, the main reason Limbaugh mentioned Silver and his statement – even opened his show with it – is to impress upon his audience "yes, these polls really do mean something and you should pay attention to them, but these of Silver's were really just an aberration..."

How will the Establishment use the polls? Maybe they can somehow still get a brokered convention and get Paul Ryan, Jeb Bush or some other bought and paid for Establishment errand boy on the ballot in Trump's place. Maybe if they're soon enough, they can hold off California delegates keeping Trump shy of the requisite delegate number. Should Trump make it past the convention as the GOP nominee, I fully expect that most of the polls will be showing that he can't beat Hillary, or that it's "close". It seems clear that many in the Establishment would prefer a Clinton win to a Trump win. Time will tell, but either way, never forget why those polls were taken.

For our part, I see it as our duty as Americans who are faithful to our constitution and way of life, to educate as many other people as possible about the polls and how they are used to corrupt our government and the selection of those who would govern for us. It's bad enough the way the social clubs we call "political parties", operating outside state laws, maneuver to corrupt the process for us. (For instance, why do we need a "delegate" when we've already paid for an election with our tax dollars and have indicated our preference? And when the delegate casts his vote in opposition to that public vote the state throws up its hands, saying "there's nothing we can do?") Let's be sure that we never permit the polls to influence our votes and that we vote strictly on matters of political policy.

A Case of Marxist Racism

Today, the Town Criers, a committee of the St. Augustine Tea Party (SATP), appeared on the streets of the historic district in St. Augustine, Florida. The Town Criers have been engaging the public in this national scene for the past five years. Over this period of time, they report many encounters with the communists and the leftists among us.

Deliberate Set Up Racial Overtones

The Town Criers started their outing at Flagler College with the intent of greeting students and providing them with pocket editions of the Constitution of the United States. A lack of young people at the college necessitated a change of plans and they proceeded to walk up historic St. George Street. They were carrying the young man pictured with her above was an American from Alabama, attending Flagler College, whose parents were from India. The woman then said, "See were all the same. Everybody's the same. I support Bernie Sanders." Lance Thate, Chairman SATP said, "No we are not the same. Some people are brown, some are white, and some are black, yellow and so on. But in America, we are all equal under the law. Bernie Sanders is a Marxist. When you let the government make decisions for you, you lose your liberty. I will not trade my freedom of choice for a crust of bread and a roof over my head. Without liberty there is only tyranny. Bernie Sander's, philosophy is tyranny. The socialist system offers no choice." At this point, the woman took off and it was later discovered that the young man was only used by her; he had never met her before. The Town Criers invited him to attend their Tea Party meeting and he agreed to come. It was clear who was racist and who was not. Victory over the communists is sometimes one person at a time.

their Gadsden flags and signs protesting political correctness (PC). The woman, pictured above, positioned herself so as to challenge the Criers, as they approached. "What do you have against brown people?" She said several times trying to get attention. The answer to the question from a Tea Party volunteer, "I have nothing against brown people. In fact I dated a woman from South Africa whose ancestry was from India." It turned out that

The Never 'Never-Trump' remedy for a closed mind

By David P. Heimbald

Now is your chance to join the brand new anti-establishment movement which is called symbolically Never 'Never-Trump', a non-profit anti-establishment movement. You'll want to be the first in your town to join the Never 'Never-Trump' anti-establishment movement because you'll feel so good to know that there's now a list of the people that will never never vote for Trump, period. We will send you that list so that you can print it and shun them for the rest of their natural born lives. We will call this new religion the Shun the anti-Trump Pseudo Intellectual Movement. If that is confusing, just think of it this way: Once Upon a Time, way back when there was only one true church, the Pope had all the answers. Just ask Copernicus. We covered the sun revolving around the earth store before, but it's worth repeating. There's just one person that has the truth. And that is the Never-Trump establishment crew that has bad mouthed Mr. Trump and elevated Mr. Cruz to the level of sainthood. Now we know that there are different steps to become a saint. In most cases you have to be dead. And while you're dead you have to perform two miracles. The first miracle would be how to shun the Never-Trump faction of the establishment forever and ever and ever. (They think they're right, holier-than-thou and above it all). They remind us of the Pharisees of old that Jesus Christ had to wrestle with. They think they alone have the truth and nobody else has the truth. They are self-righteous and they have names like Cruz and Rubio who never qualified to run for the presidency of the United States because they're not natural born citizens. But that didn't bother them. And it doesn't bother the Never-Trump gang. Not that we don't like Canadian-Cubans.

So join today and you can be a member of the Never 'Never-Trump' disestablishmentarian society. And we will post the names of all the people that said they would never vote for Trump and you will recognize many of them as being iconoclasts. Iconoclasts are basically people that have a high opinion of themselves. They point to the faults of others to make themselves even higher up and they keep playing on the faults of others until finally they get so high up in the stratosphere that they die from lack of oxygen. And they fall without remedy. In order to join the Never 'Never-Trump' anti-establishment group all you have to do is say, "I will never, never, never, never, never vote for a 'Never-Trump bigot.'" Then make a list of the Never, 'Never-Trump' faction and check off, over the next year or two, and see where their careers end up. It will probably be in the trash can. The 'Never-Trump' crowd has soiled the Tea Party brand and this is an unforgivable sin. They are therefore excommunicated from civil Society and are becoming invisible. They may still write articles, publish articles and beg for more money. But soon this movement will dry up and they will never be seen again. If they land in purgatory, no amount of money can buy their way out. There is no Indulgence big enough get them out of their misery. Because they played against the truth (they've lied against the truth, they pointed fingers and therefore the fingers come back to point at them) and have so many fingers pointing in the eye that all they'll be able to say for the rest of their lives is: "I'll never, never, never, never say never again." De-programming a Never Trump brain-washed, right-wing politically correct, religious nut is no easy task. The lock on their mind is self-righteousness. They, in their own mind, become god; always right, inflexible to a fault, pompous and totally delusionary. They hate the agent that has come to free them and lock themselves up with Pride, Prejudice, and a hidden lust for Power. They have fallen from grace.

545 vs. 300 Million People

By Charlie Reese

Politicians are the only people in the world who create problems and then campaign against them. Have you ever wondered, if both the Democrats and the Republicans are against deficits, WHY do we have deficits?

Have you ever wondered, if all the politicians are against inflation and high taxes, WHY do we have inflation and high taxes?

You and I don't propose a federal budget. The President does.

You and I don't have the Constitutional authority to vote on appropriations. The House of Representatives does. You and I don't write the tax code, Congress does. You and I don't set fiscal policy, Congress does.

You and I don't control monetary policy, the Federal Reserve Bank does. One hundred senators, 435 congressmen, one President, and nine Supreme Court justices equates to 545 human beings out of the 300 million are directly, legally, morally, and individually responsible for the domestic problems that plague this country.

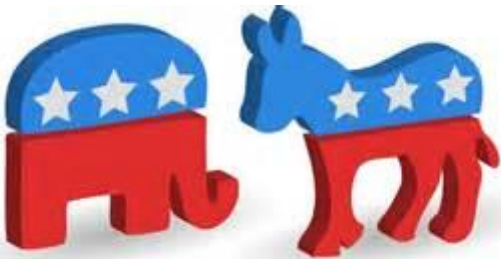

I excluded the members of the Federal Reserve Board because that problem was created by the Congress. In 1913, Congress delegated its Constitutional duty to provide a sound currency to a federally chartered, but private, central bank. I excluded all the special interests and lobbyists for a sound reason. They have no legal authority. They have no ability to coerce a senator, a congressman, or a President to do one cotton-picking thing. I don't care if they offer a politician $1 million dollars in cash. The politician has the power to accept or reject it. No matter what the lobbyist promises, it is the legislator's responsibility to determine how he votes.

Those 545 human beings spend much of their energy convincing you that what they did is not their fault. They cooperate in this common con regardless of party. What separates a politician from a normal human being is an excessive amount of gall. No normal human being would have the gall of a Speaker, who stood up and criticized the President for creating deficits. The President can only propose a budget. He cannot force the Congress to accept it. The Constitution, which is the supreme law of the land, gives sole responsibility to the House of Representatives for originating and approving appropriations and taxes. Who is the speaker of the House?

Paul Ryan. He is the leader of the majority party. He and fellow House members, not the President, can approve any budget they want. If the President vetoes it, they can pass it over his veto if they agree to.

It seems inconceivable to me that a nation of 300 million cannot replace 545 people who stand convicted -- by present facts -- of incompetence and irresponsibility... I can't think of a single domestic problem that is not traceable directly to those 545 people. When you fully grasp the plain truth that 545 people exercise the power of the federal government, then it must follow that what exists is what they want to exist. If the tax code is unfair, it's because they want it unfair. If the budget is in the red, it's because they want it in the red. If the Army & Marines are in Iraq and Afghanistan it's because they want them in Iraq and Afghanistan. If they do not receive social security but are on an elite retirement plan not available to the people, it's because they want it that way.

There are no insoluble government problems. Do not let these 545 people shift the blame to bureaucrats, whom they hire and whose jobs they can abolish; to lobbyists, whose gifts and advice they can reject; to regulators, to whom they give the power to regulate and from whom they can take this power.

Above all, do not let them con you into the belief that there exists disembodied mystical forces like "the economy", "inflation," or "politics" that prevent them from doing what they take an oath to do. Those 545 people, and they alone, are responsible. They, and they alone, have the power. They, and they alone, should be held accountable by the people who are their bosses. Provided the voters have the gumption to manage their own employees. We should vote all of them out of office and clean up their mess.

The Progressive Lies Revealed

The history of the progressive movement is that of deception and lies. From the beginning, they hid their identity. The Marxists must either convert or impose the collective mentality. They hide because no one gives up their individual liberty, freedom and the right to choose willingly. The Communist transformation, as expressed by Saul Alinsky in the late 1960s, reigns supreme in the White House. Obama taught the principles of this radical master. Hillary Rodham Clinton was an apprentice of Alinsky. Bernie Sanders is a self professed socialist and Communist.

Tea Party Right all Along....Media Complicit in the Deceit

The Town Criers, a Committee of the St. Augustine Tea Party (SATP), have been engaging the public in the historic district of St. Augustine, Florida since June 2011. The committee's five year perspective on populist opinion is unique because of their consistent involvement. Five million people visit the city annually, and they represent every state in the Union. The Town Criers are blessed to see the real America, not the one portrayed in the media. Early on, the Criers tested the public with a sign that stated, "Obama is a Communist". The original sign, pictured on the upper right, has been replaced five times as it became the most popular sign they ever carried. The Town Criers report that they no longer carry the sign. Not because it is not popular, but because the public understands Obama's real identity. When we first started carrying the sign in 2012, some people would say, "No, he's a Socialist". Now they respond with, "Yeah, he's a Communist and a Muslim sympathizer, too." About a year ago, the Town Criers started carrying the sign pictured on the left. It has proven to be a very popular sign. The "Hillary for Prison Benghazi" sign has been upgraded for the upcoming election. It is pictured above in the election colors of red, white and blue.

Socialism Sucks

In addition to the "Hillary for Prison" sign, the Town Criers also introduced a new sign that states, "Socialism Sucks". "The inspiration for the sign came from the Internet. It is a sign that young people are taking to their campuses and displaying in the faces of their communist professors. "Something else the media doesn't report," according to Lance Thate SATP Chairman. The sign shown above attracted young people on its first outing.

The media totally ignores the populist sentiment. It mimics the establishment party leaders of both parties. In a recent interview with Dr. Carson, Megan Kelly ignored Dr. Carson's comments about Saul Alinsky and quickly changed the subject. No one in media will use the word Communism, as it applies to many of our public officials. "I can report that the public is no longer accepting the media bias. We have been conducting polls on St. George Street. The polls reveal huge rejection of Hillary Clinton while the big-name pollsters claim the opposite. The Tea Party has been right all along", David Heimbold, SATP Media Chairman said.
